FOR SELF-DEFENSE

A strong argument in favor of protection is that it is necessary as a means of nal self preservation. Free traders affect to regard this proposition with great contempt, but it is a fact nevereless that many of our greatest minds in this country have maintained it.

Suppose that, through some untoward circumstances, we should become involved in a war with one or more European nations from which we import many things necessary for us to have in a time of war. Suppose that during all our national existence we had followed the advice so generously bestowed upon us by free traders and had devoted ourselves principally to farming pursuits, and had allowed the nations with which we were at war to make and sell to us most of the manufactures consumed by us, including our mechanical tools and implements, and also arms, ammunition and military equipments, how would it be possible for us to contend successfully in a war with such nations?

Of course without manufactories of our own we should be at the marcy of our enemies till such time as we could establish them and produce our own implements of warfare and other needed supplies; and, if it ever could be accomplished, it would be under the most adverse conditions, especially as in such a case we should be entirely without the skilled laborers and artisans necessary for such as the state of the same recessary for such as the same recessary for s for such an undertaking.

A great and diversified country like ours has within it all the elements of national self development, self support and self preservation.

But these elements cannot be properly developed without numerous and diversified manufactories, and these cannot be built up and maintained without a strong protective tariff. In his first message to the first congress Washington said: The safety and interest of the people require that they should promote such manufactures as tend to render them independent of others for essentials, and particularly for military supplies."

Alexander Hamilton, one of the world's greatest financiers, in his great report on manufactures in 1790, said:

Not only the wealth but the inde-"Not only the wealth but the had-pendence of a country appear to be ma-terially connected with the prosperity of manufactures. Every nation with a view to these great objects ought to en-deavor to possess within itself all the essentials of national supply. These comprise the means of subsistence, habitation, clothing and defense. The possession of these is necessary to the per-fection of the body politic and to the safety as well as the weifare of society. The want of either is the want of an important organ of political life and mo-tion, and, in the various crises that await a state, it must seriously feel the effects of any such deficiency.'

And he cites the extreme embarrass-neuts of the United States during the Revolutionary war from their inability to supply themselves with many things that they greatly needed as a striking proof of his statement, and shows how se embarracements may be overcome by judicious protection to our manufac-

In 1816 John C. Calhoun, discussing

"The security of a country mainly de-pends upon its spirit and means; and as every people are subject to the vicinsi-tudes of peace and war, it must ever be considered the plain dictate of wisdom in peace to prepare for war."

And then he shows that this can be done only by establishing manufactures and protecting them against foreign competition by proper tariff duties. In 1878 James A. Garfield uttered the following weighty words:

"So important in my opinion is the ability of the nation to manufacture all those articles necessary to arm, equip and clothe our people that, if it could be secured in any other way I would vote to pay money out of the federal treasury to maintain government iron and steel, woolen and cotton mills at whatever cost. Were we to neglect these great interests and depend upon other nations, in what a condition of helplessness would we find ourselves when we should he again involved in war with the very nations on whom we were depending to furnishing us with these supplies. The system adopted by our fathers is wiser, for it so encourages the great national industries as to make it possible at all times for our people to equip themselves for war, and at the same time to increase their intelligence and skill, so as to make them better fitted for all the duties of citizenship both in peace and in war. We provide for the common fense by a system which promotes the Burden of a Bevenue Tariff.

One of the main differences between a free trade and a protective tariff is that the former is always paid mainly by the poor, while the latter, when it is not paid by the foreigner, falls exclu-sively on the rich and well to do. According to the British statistician, Mul-hall, the £19,267,000 collected under Great Britain's free trade tariff in 1883 was paid by the British people in the following proportion: The rich paid £1,301,000, the middle class £6,808,000, the working class £11,267,660. Do our working people want that kind of a

FLOW ON, SWIFT STREAM

Pipe on, swift stream, amid the forces.
Flow on and dance with joy,
And tell me of the happy hours
When I was yet a boy.
I watched thee with the loved ones then.
Now all alone I come again
To wander by the river;
And I am old and they are gone.
But it unchanged is griding on
As young and bright as ever.

Unchanged it seems, yet who can stay
The water's coascless motion?
The little waves of yesterday
Today have reached the ocean;
Unmarked, unmissed, they swiftly fly,
Unmarked, unmissed, we, too, must dia,
And leave the mighty river,

Where youth and joy and love and strife,
And all the various modes of life,
Flow on unchanged forever.

The local physicians are busy with their usual July cases of cholera in-fantum, which have been increasing rapidly the last few days. "This fearful cause of infantile mortality," said a prominent physician yesterday, "can be prevented easier than it can be cured. I have about twenty babies on lactated food and none of them show any signs of cholera infantum, but the disease is common in families where this food is and one-half pounds and was so poor that the skin hung on him in folds and wrinkles. His trials were only begun, for the nurse did not seem to think it worth while to save such a poor little specimen of humanity and neglected him. His mother's milk disagreed with him and he grow if possible thinner. A republican County convention will be held in the Metropolitan hall, over 61 Pearl street, in the city of Grand Rapids, Michigan, on Thursday, July 14, 1882, at 11 o'clock a.m., for the purpose of electing forty-seven delegates to the republican state convention to be held in the city of Saginaw, on Wednesday, July 20, 1881, and for the transaction of such 6ther business as may properly come before the convention.

Papers throughout the country have printed many letters this summer from physicians and parents, urging the use of lautated food, while boards of health in many sections have co-operated with the manufacturers in its introduction, for it saves babies' lives.

Under a resolution of 188, no delegate will be entitled to a seat in the convention who does not reside in the county he proposes to represent. Hon. James W. Husted, while serv-ing his sixth term as speaker of the as-sembly of the state of New York, writes:

> Some Good Suggestions to Feeding.

"I felt as though I could not live through the recent hot spell," said a Grand Rapids mother yesterday, "but when I saw how miserable the hot, parched air made my little children feel, I took courage and tried to en-direct."

Hot weather is depressing to grownup people, but it is positively killing for little children. There are dangers in the air and in the water, cholers infantum and the various troubles which children have, come down upon the little band like an army. At first, parents notice a languor and peevish-ness on the part of the child: Instead of being full of life and energy, it appears miserable. Instead of being hun-gry most of the time, it does not care for food, and even if it takes food, its for food, and even if it takes food, its stomach too often rejects it. It is a dangerous time tor any child when things occur. It is a time when the little one must be fed, must be nourished. It is a time when pure food, which its little stomach will receive and turn into vitality, must be given. Parents too often fail to realize this.

Parents too often fail to realize this, and fail to take proper care, until unfortunately it is too late.

There is but one scientifically prepared food for children, and that is lactated food. There are more than one hundred thousand children in this iand today who unquestionably owe their lives to its use. The Herald could be filled with the grateful words of fathers and mothers who realize what it has done for their children.
